A Generous Offer!

George B. Wright Discovers a Cure for Lost Manhood and Sends it Free to Every Sufferer Who Will Write For it.

G. B. WRIGHT.

Gratitude is one of the noblest impulses of the human heart, and in few instances has this fine quality been so conspicuously exemplified as in the case of George B. Wright.

Mr. Wright is a merchant and well known citizen of Marshall, Mich., who was suffering from a condition of impotency, and was reduced to a condition of semi-invalidism.

He sought a cure in various ways, but found no relief until he heard of the remarkable success of Dr. John G. Brinkley, of Wichita, Kan., in curing cases of impotency.

He wrote to Dr. Brinkley, asking him to send him some of the glands.

Dr. Brinkley sent him a sample of glands, and Mr. Wright took them and applied them to his penis, and found that he was cured.

He has since written to Dr. Brinkley, asking him to send him some more glands.
